

Rwanda: The first Save80 stove from the new factory

Kigali, Rwanda March 2022: Finally, the first completely locally produced stove leaves the new stove factory.

In the last months, we have built a factory in Kigali, the capital of Rwanda, where our Save80 stoves will be produced. At the end of last year, the machines for the production line also arrived in a container from Germany. Our technical developer Bernhard Ellmann travelled to Kigali to support our project partners with customs and the installation of the machines and to give an introduction to the use of the machines. In February, we completed the installation of the machines and started with the first tests for production.

We are now very happy to announce that last week the first Save80 stove was completed in this factory. Full production is scheduled to start this summer - 40,000 stoves are expected to leave the factory in Kigali each year, making an important contribution to fighting climate crisis.
